

NORTH CAROLINA.

Corn is 68 cents a bushel in New Bern.

Concord is trying to have a National Bank.

Magnolia is annoyed by boys jumping and wrestling in the streets.

No unfortunates found their way into the Wilmington hospital last week.

Seven marriage licenses were issued in New Hanover county last week.

The people in Cabarrus county want the "Thunder struck" bridge re-built.

Magnolia has a lodge of Knights of Pythias, and a lodge of Good Templars.

William Cullen Bryant and Hon. S. S. Cox were expected in Wilmington on Saturday.

Eight hundred and eighty-six dollars and fifty cents were paid into the Wilmington Treasury last week.

Tileson Normal School, Wilmington, is soon to give a public exhibition of the Cantata, called the "Christian Graces."

Portions of Cabarrus county suffered severely from the recent hail and rain storm which swept over that section last Tuesday.

The indications are that the next Board of Aldermen of Wilmington will be composed of four Conservatives and six Republicans.

John Pool, the other day was committed to jail in Concord for stealing a pair of pants. Who says there is nothing in a name!

Mr. John LeGwin has been elected by the Wilmington Typographical Union, Delegate to the 21st annual session of the International Union, to be held in Montreal, Canada, in June next.

According to the census of 1872 there are 2,570 white, and 1,055 colored, children in Cabarrus county between the ages of six and twenty-one. The amount paid for white schools was $700 $74; to colored school $478.75.

We learn that the Wilmington Journal, of the 6th inst that two Richmondu county farmers, who removed to the neighborhood of Topeka, Kansas, a few years ago, have returned to this State, pretty well satisfied with the experience of life out west. They were at the National Hotel, in this city, on Friday night, with their families, and yesterday went up the road to their old homes in Richmond county. They speak in the highest terms of the productiveness of the country they have just left, but they were too far removed from the markets of the world to make their labor profitable. One of them says that he made last year 3700 bushels of corn, part of which he used for fuel during the past winter and part of which he left unused. There is nothing to be made by sending it to market. It will cost 5 cents a bushel to sell it and 5 cents to freight it and that is about all the corn would bring in any market within his reach. Taken all together, his experience goes to prove that there is no place like the Old North, after all.

Says the Charlotte Democrat of the 6th instant:

"We see a notice in the Raleigh papers from the Receiver of this Bank, B. F. Moore, Esq., notifying creditors to file their claims with him or Mr. Chas. Dewey at Raleigh, before the 25th of April. We suppose creditors only means the bill or note holders.

Many stockholders would like to know something of the condition of the concern and whether there is the slight probability of getting anything for their stock. It is suggested that the stockholders at different points in the State, or at some one point, hold a meeting and ask for information as to the management of the affairs of the Bank since the war. At the close of the war we think the Bank held nearly $100,000 in specie. With that sum and a large amount of valuable real estate and written obligations in the hands of the officers and Directors, it is not understood by stockholders why it is there is no prospect of realizing anything for their stock. If permitted, an investigation by a committee of stockholders from different parts of the State might afford some light or satisfaction."

The Hon. Mr. Turner, a prominent politician of Warren county, Kentucky, died from one of those peculiar presentations of which books compiled for curious readers contain many instances. Mr. Turner had been informed, so he repeatedly told his friends, eleven years before, that at a certain time he would die. The facts of the case are vouchsafed by an eminent physician now practicing his profession at Bowling Green, Kentucky, which remarkable physician is, as far as we know, anonymous. For eleven years Mr. Turner quietly waited. He looked forward to the event foretold with perfect confidence. His manner when adverting to it was always apparently composed and free from painful forebodings. His business habits remained the same, and he passed quietly through the eleven tedious years patiently awaiting that event which is ordinarily fraught with more or less terror to the average human mind. He died, of course, on the day and hour mentioned by the "mysterious voice," which eleven years previous had gifted him, for no earthly reason that is intelligible, with a knowledge not often vouchsafed to mortals. So runs the story; credit it who will.

Mr. Charles C. Jones will publish this month "The Antiquities of the Southern Indians, particularly of the Georgia Tribes." "Mr. Jones," we are told, "is now of New York, but was formerly of Savannah, where, as president of the Historical Society of Georgia, he achieved a solid reputation." His work will be very interesting to the South. It is devoted "to consideration of the monuments, relics and ancient customs of the aboriginal population now occupying that portion of the United States at present embraced within the geographical limits of Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee." It will be illustrated with thirty-five plates from original pictures in the author's collection, which have never been used, and by numerous wood cuts.

A story of a young man named Brown, electro-magnetism, and a streaming rays of light. Brown worked originally in a machine shop at Red Oak, Iowa, and may have become magnetic by constant contact with iron in all its forms and conditions. Absurd! Is it? Then half the scientific theories that pass under the patronage of a name are equally preposterous. However, Brown being magnetic, met with a certain Captain Bartlett, who invested money in him, and is now exhibiting him through the west. Here is how the experiments in electric power are made. Any one desiring to test young Brown's powers, fixes his mind on an object, and the youth, after two or three passes, places his forehead on the hands of the experimenter, and leads him to the object. Should the one experimenting allow his mind to waver from the object, Brown is thrown from the right direction. He gets up, in fact, a kind of personal, private Aurora Borealis. Whether or not Bartlett and the wonderful Brown have made money, we are not told; but if they would try finding a gold mine, or Captain Kidd's treasure or something of that kind, instead of pottering about country villages, it prove remunerative.

The lines of ocean steamers now comprise 139 vessels, and it is a very significant fact that not one of these lines is purely American, and only one has but little American capital. The foreign steamship interest is immense, the intercourse between the two hemispheres as frequent as it was forty years ago between two of our American States, and except now and then, when an appalling disaster like the loss of the Atlantic occurs, the general public feel little sense of insecurity in ocean travel. The Canard, the Innam, the Anchor, the White Star, the Guion, the National, the Great Western, the Cardiff, the French, the Allan line and the North German Lloyds, the last two of which run from Baltimore, are the leading lines.

We learn that our citizens are slow in engaging lock-boxes in the city Post office. These boxes would certainly be a great convenience to business men. We learn that the Postmaster will order and put up the boxes if fifty can be engaged. The charge will be $3 for the box. They will be the property of the person ordering the box, and can be sold or transferred at any time. The box rent will be $5 per annum. The use of lock-boxes will serve to decrease the "rush" which takes place whenever the doors are opened, and will enable the holders of lock-boxes to deposit their letters and take out their mails at all hours.

SELECTED POETRY

(From the Baltimorean,
APRIL.)

BY MRS. JERNINGHAM.

Month of smiles and showers,
Changeless skies and flowers,
Hither, hither come;
I have wood then long,
These woodland scenes among—
Hasten to thy home.

Scatter from thy hand
Upon the green earth,
Glands fresh and fair;
Call the swallows back
From their pathless track
To meet thee here.

Then ridest on the gale,
And the ill pass by;
Upright stand;—
Let the dew-drops lie
Beneath the changeable sky
Where Flora's couch is spread.

The cuckoo's voice is clear,
And to the listening ear
Bright promise brings—
Of fondness, of love,
To whom the wandering bee,
Its welcome sing.

The rock builds in the wood,
And rears its stable brood
Secure on high;
The lark from upland springs,
And hails its carding crew,
Ascending to the sky.

Sweet month! I bid the hall!
The winter's task of mail
No more is seen
But on the flowing lea,
And on the budding tree,
Fresh shoots of green.

Oh! we shall miss thy tears
When fragrant May appears,
Then fair they'll be,
The birds will chirp down,
Upon the budding thorn,
Shall sing thy knell.

BALTIMORE, April, 1873.

In other cases there may be a conflict of opinion, and each fond mother may have her own ideas on the subject, but all will, we think, unite in agreeing that the infant heir of the Shultz family, of Chicago, is the most wonderful baby that ever was seen. Shultz, the father, is a German, a man of theories, one of which is that the circulation of the blood can be kept up after birth as before, under proper conditions. He tried his experiments first on new born puppies, with entire success. Fired by an honorable ambition to produce something entirely new under the sun, he then took his own infant, plunged it into a tub of warm water, kept his hand on its heart, and with reckless joy found the blood, with a bound, force itself into the old channel, dissolved since birth. The heart beat naturally, and the child upon being taken out of the water cried feebly upon regaining the use of its lungs. Why prolong the tale? The same experiment was tried day after day, until it became no longer an experiment. Shultz found himself the happy father of an amphibious baby. He is a perfect young hippopotamus. He can scarcely, though not yet able to toddle, be kept out of the bath-tub. Placed on the edge, with his chubby little legs just touching the water, he will plunge boldly in, and crawl around on the bottom, picking up cents that are dropped in for his amusements, peppermint lozenges, and anything else that appeals to fancy. He stays under water until he gets tired, and then lifts up his little hands to be taken out. Certainly, a remarkable child.

TIN IN CALIFORNIA —The San Diego (Cal.) World gives the following information in relation to recent discoveries of tin in that State. It says: "In a range of mountains, which is a prolongation of the Temescal chain, about twenty miles east of that place, and twelve miles south of San Bernardino, a party of prospectors last September stumbled on a ledge, which showed Temescal ore. Among the prospectors was a Temescal miner, who instantly built a monument and located the ledge, claiming 1,500 feet. Prospecting around in the neighborhood, two others were found, taken up and located. In spite of those ledges several stones were found resembling and shaped like garnets. Mr. Brownhart sent several of these to a Berlin lapidary, who, after cutting, returned them, informing Mr. Brownhart that, were they a shade lighter in color, they would be worth $30 a carat. Experts, however, pronounce them 'brown crystal.' A few weeks ago Mr. Ambrose Hunt, while prospecting in the same neighborhood, struck several large ledges, the ore of which, on examination, was found to be very rich in tin."
